

CLAIMS

What is claimed is:

1. A mobile communicator, which utilizes wireless transmitting technology to receive or emit signals, the appearance of the mobile communicator at least includes a plurality of buttons that is used to input data and a display that is used to show information,
5 the mobile communicator characterized in:

the display is located below the plurality of buttons.

2. The mobile communicator according to claim 1, wherein the appearance further includes an antenna on the top.

- 10 3. The mobile communicator according to claim 1, wherein the appearance further includes a sound-taking aperture which is located between the antenna and the plurality of buttons.

4. The mobile communicator according to claim 1, wherein the appearance further includes a sound-sending aperture which is located on the lower position.